

Veer Towers Celebrates The Comeback of Luxury Condo Market

by Susan Stapleton

Jim Navarro, vice president of sale for Pordes Residential, with his wife Maria and their daughter.

More than 500 guests attended a Las Vegas-style celebration at Veer Towers on June 20 that honored the comeback of the luxury condo market in Sin City.

The 37-story twin towers that form a V and sit in the heart of City Center took center stage as brokers, potential buyers, residents and other distinguished guests raised a toast to the resurgent condo market.

The event began at Wolfgang Puck Pizzeria & Cucina inside Crystals, where attendees were treated to fine food and drinks of their choice. The party continued into Veer Towers where guests could openly tour the building from the lobbies to the SkyDeck roof top entertainment area and visit a selection of newly designed model units.

In addition, some of the designer stores from The Shops at Crystals setup pop-up boutiques within model units. Guests had the chance to win giveaways from Fendi, Jimmy Choo, Donna Karan, Tourbillon, Kiki de Montparnasse and Mikimoto.

Veer Towers is leading the way in the comeback of the Las Vegas luxury condo market with more than 60 sales since the start of 2013.

A showgirl in a pool bubble.

A Kiki de Montparnasse model in a model unit.

The red carpet for the Veer Towers party.

Showing off Tourbillon watches.