Luxury condominiums open on the Vegas strip

July 11, 2013

Built at opposing five-degree angles for a leaning, peek-a-boo effect, and designed by Murphy/Jahn Architects of Chicago, Veer Towers are for residents only.

Where else but in fabulous Las Vegas could you claim fashion designers such as Christian Dior, Nanette Lepore, Tom Ford and Stella McCartney as your downstairs neighbors? Purchase a luxury condo in one of the two gorgeous, 37-story, high-rise Veer Towers above the Shops at Crystals, and you can do exactly that.

Built at opposing five-degree angles for a leaning, peek-a-boo effect and designed by Murphy/Jahn Architects of Chicago, Veer Towers are for residents only – no rowdy vacationers here. Each building is topped off with a hospitality patio, sexy infinity swimming pool, luxurious hot tub, sundeck and a glorious view of the world-famous Vegas Strip.

The condominium towers are LEED Gold-certified, which means they're sustainable, eco-friendly and energy-efficient, and they feature five living spaces (studio, deluxe studio, one-bedroom, two-bedroom and three-bedroom) and 19 different floor plans.

Ranging in price from $250,000 to $2 million, the spaces are chic, sleek and modern. They boast nine- to 12-foot ceilings (depending on the chosen floor plan); contemporary, European-style kitchens; high-end designer flooring; and recessed architectural lighting.

But at Veer, you aren't just purchasing a condo. What you're getting for your money is a complete lifestyle. Residents enjoy 24-hour security and concierge service; a secluded driveway and valet service; fitness centers with panoramic views; steam rooms and saunas; media and billiard rooms; and special benefits and priority access to select dining and entertainment.

Las Vegas living just doesn't get any better than this. And who wouldn't want to live just above Gucci?
